AIGUALLUM LAMPARO

BY DAVID TENA

In unspecified time and space, male bodies lie in the darkness of the night. The incessant sound of an engine seems to keep them asleep while travelling cradled by the swaying of a boat. Up on deck, a group of men pray facing the point where the sun will rise in a few hours' time. Aiguallum Lamparo follows in the footsteps of the last community of fishermen of Cap de Creus who practice ancestral "fire-fishing." Here, the fishermen attract the fish by playing with light.
